Experience the Ultimate in Entertainment: High Definition Throughout Your Home

When building your dream home, you control how you'll live right from the blueprint stage. Now is the time to express your preferences and style with unique personal touches that make your home like no other. Imagine being able to control virtually every room—from your music and movies to household lighting, temperature and security—from anywhere in your home. This is all yours with the ultimate home entertainment and control system: the NHS-130C from Sony.

The system is an advanced, built-in HD whole-home entertainment system that is fully integrated throughout your house—from the great room to the bedroom to your master bath and even outside on the deck. It's simple enough for everyone in your family to use, yet it's backed by sophisticated technology that distributes HD video and all your favorite music wherever you want in your home.

Since Control4's home operating system is fully integrated, you can easily access the entire system throughout your home with wireless remote controls, in-wall keypads and table-top touch panels with on-screen controls. With just a touch, control your home theater and multiroom AV distribution, automate your lighting to match your mood, program your thermostat to reduce energy costs, and get peace of mind knowing that your security system is actively protecting your home. It's all about making your home life easier and more entertaining.

Our system fits the way you live and entertain. During the construction phase of your home, everything from speakers to touch panels can be placed exactly where they should be. You customize the system and components to suit your lifestyle. So get started today by adding the finishing touches to your dream home.
